Purpose: Help users identify the correct urban development service before asking about documents, fees, processing time or application status.

It covers questions such as:

- I want to start a shop. Which trade licence should I apply for?
- I want to construct a new building.
- I want to modify an already approved building plan.
- I want to demolish and reconstruct my building.
- I need an occupancy certificate.
- I need a new water or sewerage connection.
- I want permission for a signboard or hoarding.
- I want to pay property tax.
- Should I choose the AMC or Non-AMC service?

This guide only helps with service selection.

The following information must come from the generated service knowledge or live SWAAGAT database:

- Required documents
- Fees
- CAF requirement
- Processing time
- Application form fields
- Approval flow
- Payment status
- Current application status
- Certificate or approval availability

2. Important Recommendation Rules

1. First determine whether the property or establishment falls under AMC or Non-AMC jurisdiction.
 2. Do not recommend an AMC service for a Non-AMC location.
 3. Do not recommend a Non-AMC service for a location falling under AMC jurisdiction.
 4. For building-related questions, first identify whether the user wants:
 - New construction
 - Alteration or addition
 - Revision of an approved plan
 - Demolition and reconstruction
 - Occupancy certificate after construction
 5. A construction permit and an occupancy certificate are not the same.
 6. A trade licence and property tax payment are not the same.
 7. A water connection and sewerage connection are separate services.
 8. Signage permission and hoarding permission may represent different uses. Ask what the user wants to display and where it will be installed.
 9. Do not infer ownership, eligibility, property classification or municipal jurisdiction without verified information.
 10. When jurisdiction or application purpose is unclear, ask a clarification question before recommending a service.

6. Commonly Confused Urban Development Journeys

New building versus revised building plan

Recommend a new construction-permit service when the user is proposing a new building.
Consider the alteration/addition/revision service when:

- A building already exists, or
- A plan has already been submitted or approved, and ☐ The user wants to change or expand it.

Revision versus demolition and reconstruction

Use the alteration/revision path when an existing structure or plan is being modified.

Consider demolition and reconstruction when the existing structure will be removed and rebuilt.

Construction permit versus occupancy certificate

Construction permit:

- Required before or during the approval stage for proposed construction.

Occupancy certificate:

- Considered after construction is completed.

Never recommend an occupancy certificate merely because the user mentions a building.

Trade licence versus property tax

Trade licence:

- Relates to operating the applicable trade or business.

Property tax:

- Relates to tax payment for a property.

A business operating from a property may deal with both, but they remain separate services.

Signage versus hoarding

Signage may refer to a shop or business display.

A hoarding generally refers to a separate or larger advertising display.

The exact distinction and applicability must be verified by the department.

Water versus sewerage

Water connection and sewerage connection are separate services.

Do not infer one from the other.
